THE GREAT SPRING TONIC.

W. H. GIBERT, Druggist, Albany, Ga., writes: "Wo are selling large quantities of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for a spring alterative and general health tonic, and with the best results." It is now largely used as a preventive and cure for Malaria. There are many remarkable evidences of its merit in this section."

Rev. L. R. PAINE, Macon, Ga., writes: "We have been using Swift's Specific of the Orphan's Home as a remedy for blood complaints, and as a general health tonic, and have had remarkable results from its use on the children and employees of the institution. It is such an excellent tonic, and keeps the blood's pure, that the cystem is less liable to disease. It has cured some of our children of Scrafman."

A Good Wife. In order to fill the bill as a good wife, a woman should possess certain qualifications and almost any man can tell you just what these qualifications are.

In the first place, she should be goodlooking. It makes a man feel discouraged to see a homely woman around his house, and to feel that as this goes on she will be growing plainer right along, so much on the child's personal account, She must have a good temper. A man does not want to be nagged. It makes home distasteful to him, and he besides, the director of the zoological does not feel as if he ought to be blamed if he frequents the public house and the club room.

No matter how cross and ill-natured he may be, his wife must be sweet. "A soft answer turneth way wrath," he says; father and mother are Macaque monkeys, and when a man quotes Scripture he has got you fast.

will tell you. A man's life is full of Back of the cage, a couple of feet off, cares and perplexities, and all a woman run steam pipes so, though the temperahas to do is just stay at home, and see to ture outside was at the freezing point, the house, and look after the children inside the building it was 75 deg, Fahand servants.

She must meet her husband with a mile, this good wife of his, and no matter if she has the headache, or the cook an additional five inches. He looks curtains than she has, and has been in to inquisitive beadlike eyes, and he keeps tell her about them, she must smile all

She musu't ask him troublesome questions about the lodge meeting which kept him last night till long past midnight, and she musn't mind the smell of cloves he is diligently climbing up the wire on his breath. Some men's breath have netting, putting out one paw carefully a natural clove smell.

She must always be ready to find his hat and gloves. Hats and gloves have a mania for getting lost, and it takes a woman to find them every time.

No man living ever yet found any of his dry goods, without first turning the house upside down, and declaring that the thing sought for was not in the

She must be delighted when any or take the privilege of prying into her domestic affairs, and of telling her that she will certainly send "poor brother John" to the poor house, if she keeps on using so much sugar and wasting so much She must bear with equanimity the said John's allusions to "mother's flipjacks and mother's gingerbread," and she musn't feel hurt if he lays dyspepsia to that cake she had for supper last night. She musn't mind it if he reads the newspaper and rattles it, too, when her head aches enough to split, and instead of petting her and being distracted with anxiety as he used to be. A husband can't be expected to hold this way It is too much of a strain. But if his head aches, she must be ready with camphor, and bay rum, smelling salts, and the fine comb, and the electric hair brush, and she must banish the children and muffle the door bell, and attend to him, and if nursery maid. But when I presumed, she steps into the back yard for a minute to get breath and talk over the last fashion book with her next door neighbor, he feels' bitterly wronged, and thinks himself the most forbearing of mon if he

She must not wake him up in the night to help her listen for burglars, and she must not think of sending him down stairs to see if the back door is fastened, or to discover whether or not the cat is shut up in the pantry. The back entry oil-cloth is as cold as the ice on the polar ocean, and he might catch his death.

She must take her colicky baby where her husband will not be disturbed by its crying. It always did set his nerves on edge to hear a baby cry, he will tell her, in the voice of a man bitterly wronged and imposed upon.

There are a great many other qualities requisite in a good wife, but of course everything cannot be looked for in one woman, and if you are a wife, and want your husband to love you, try and be what we describe, and he will quote you to his second wife as a model of all the womanly and wifely graces.-Clara Augusta, in Saturday night.

Everybody commits blunders at one ime or another in their lives; some people are always blundering, some very rarely. To both those who are frequent blunderers and those who are infrequent comes alike the question, "What are you going to do about it?" As a general answer to that question perhaps, "Admit the blunder frankly," is as good as any that can be given; laugh at it, if it can be laughed at, as heartily as anybody else does, repair it if it can be repaired, never repeat it, and forget it but not the lesson

It is a melancholy fact that we often feel worse over our blunders than we do over our sins, probably because the offended majesty of God is less real to us Neither man shall use any artificial than the sorry plight our blunder puts in before our fellows. If ever "misery loves company" it is when we are conscious of having blundered. Then it is a comfort to for any purpose, or escape the eye of one think that other people have blundered of the referees. too. If when they have done so we can mantle of charity, and their blunder with the mantle of oblivion, we may hope to receive the like treatment.

We usually prefix the word stupid to the word blunder and say a stupid blunder, but the noun is just as significant without the adjective, which is merely a vent for our feelings, and an innocent

Young people are more apt to blunder than old ones, chiefly because they haven't been through the entire category of blunders as their elders have and learned to avoid committing them. After being tripped here and there along the pathway one learns to place his feet carefully and avoid what would make him stumble, and when he see another fellow mortal bite the dust, he smiles to himself at the remembrance of how he once was in just that ungraceful position from a like

Just like any other first class baby, he always scems to want to find out exactly what he can do, and so he keeps doing it. When his affectiouste mother is not cuddling him, after the other; and he is indefatigable. He would like to shin up ever so far, but his anxious mamma eves him closely, and then, seizing him by the tail, pulls him down again to her perch. Yawcob's tail is convenient for catching him with, and it answers to what would be a long skirt on the regulation crawling baby. Mrs. Jenny's love for her little one is intense; her care of him constant. Though he is a very bothering baby, she his relatives come to pay her a visit, and never tires of his pranks. After he has made his explorations up the wire meshes, she takes him, hugs him to her breast. and nurses him. Probably he has been going on that way for many hours, and she is quite worn out. Then she holds him fast and indulges in a cat nap-that is, providing a monkey can take a cat

> While I was looking, her breakfast was served. It was a ripe banana. She was not at all greedy, but divided her attention between the banana and baby. She munched the fruit, holding it in one hand, while the other was round the baby. Yawcob noticed the banana and took a nibble, and that seemed to please his mamma..

There is another Mr. Jacob, and he is a man, the keeper of the monkey house and this Mr. Jacob is on close terms of intimacy with Mrs. Jenny, for she seems to regard him as if he were her head on my invitation of course, to approach near her going to the back of her cage, she was not at all nice or polite. She made a fearful face at me, showed me her teeth, lifted up a threatening paw, and scolded me. Evidently, in her poor monkey mind the idea was that I was a horrid, bad man, intent on kidnapping her darling.

Baby's father, who lives in the same box cage, one story higher, is not allowed to keep company with his wife and child. He has no responsibilities. All monkeys are curious, and so occasionally the father monkey will take a peep through a crack at the occupants in the apartment below, and, as likely as not, he asks Mrs. Jenny in simian language: "Having a good time? And oh! I say, how is the little chap getting on? Upon my word, he is quite good-looking; just like me."

I spent an hour watching them, and Yawcob never seemed tired. He was always climbing up the wire, and always being hauled down again. Then his mamma would fondle him, and he would stay close to her breast for twenty seconds, and then would wiggle out of her embraces, and go at once to climbing. Of course it was amusing, but what I could not but notice and admire was the great love the monkey mother had for her little one .- Harper's Young People.

To Keep Awake a Week.

DETROIT, March 14 .- The strangest of all matches for making money and notoriety was made here to-day by Andrew J. Hunt, a sturdy Scotchman of thirty-eight, and William Bowerman, a slight built, but determined-looking, Irishman of twenty two.

Each contestant is to be on the stage at a local museum at midnight, March 30, to begin a vigil contest, which shall end at the expiration of the one hundred and sixty-eighth hour from its start, or when one gives up. Neither contestant shall be allowed an attendant to keep him awake and shall at all times respond to the question of the referee to determine his condition. Either contestant may order the referee to ask his opponent a question at any time he may desire. means to keep awake. He shall not be restricted as to what he shall eat or drink, but shall not be allowed to leave the hall

The two men are to deposit $75 each, the winner to take all and a certain portion of the gate receipts.

The Oldest Man in the County.

Henry Abbott, or "Honey Bee" as he used to call himself, is perhaps the oldest man in the County. A few years ago we tried to ascertain his age, but he and some of his sons differed in opinion. Saturday W. M. Foster was in town and he says that Henry was born in February, 1795. Mr. Foster has a remarkably fine memory, and he says that his mother, who died ten or twelve years ago, often said that he was born in December and Henry in February 1795. She was positively certain of this. Henry recently finished up his 96th year and has entered on the 97th with a fair prospect of reaching one hundred. During the winter he has been rather feeble, but he is generally able to walk into town and attend the monthly meetings of the Mechanics Building and Loan Association. He has broken down on his weather prophecies and during the re-

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT any small house with big expenses can compete with a big house that buys and sells $500,000 yearly of Pianos and Organs, and has rustling, hustling agents like John L. Haynie & Daughters, who do all their own work, pay small rent, and are satisfied with small profits?

Ludden & Bates' Southern Music House s the greatest Piano and Organ concern in the South, and when you wish to buy the pest instrument at the fairest price, see JOHN L. HAYNIE & DAUGHTERS, Beautiful Plants, Orchids, &c. LOVERS of fine Plants will find a large collection of Beautiful and Rare Plants, as well as Novelties of merit.

This rich collection is well grown, and offered at very low prices.
